Dear President Reagan:

I wish to thank you for the photo I received of the Red Sox when they visited you and the correspondence I have received in answer to the two letters that I have sent to you. In addition I would like to wish you the best during your last few months in office.

However, I do have one suggestion for you in your December meeting with Mr. Gorbachev. A few years ago a good deal of attention was paid to the return of Raoul Wallenberg to freedom; the attention now seems to have died. I would like to suggest that in your last meeting with Mr. Gorbachev that you do not let the search die.

Instead, I recommend that you bring Wallenberg up and demand evidence of either his death or his continued survival. If Mr. Gorbachev is willing to delve into a poignant blotch on his country's history than that would demonstrate a new willingness on his part. If, however, he does not respond adequately then it would show a severe limitation of his fabled and glorified Glasnost.

Wallenberg is a symbol of so much for so many people; it would be a shame to allow his image to die along with him, if indeed, he has died.
